52. Paul : Kathleen's still not her usual cheerful self.

Brenda : ----

Paul : By the way, has the man been caught?

Brenda : Oh yes. And the trial is next week. When that's over, she'll probably start to forget all about it.

A) That's understandable. Her husband's operation turned out to be far more serious than they had expected.

B) Well, what do you expect? It's not very pleasant to find a burglar in the house when you get home.

C) Well she's had a nasty shock. She still can't understand why she fell down those stairs.

D) Oh, but she is improving. When did you last see her?

E) She's been having a really hard time lately; no wonder she's depressed.

53. Molly : I hear Jane's moving into a flat in one of those high-rise buildings. I hope she won't regret it.

Ann : ----

Molly : Won't she?

Ann : Oh no. She plans to go off to her cottage in the country every Friday evening and spend the weekend evening there.

A) Why should she? She won't be spending much time there anyway.

B) I worry about that too. But it's her decision.

C) I shouldn't think so. She used to feel nervous in that big house, you know.

D) Well, after all, she goes out nearly every evening.

E) At least she won't be short of money any more.

54. Pam : I spent the afternoon at the Rembrandt's Women exhibition.
- Jane : I'd wondered about going. Did you really enjoy seeing so many portraits of women?
- Pam : ----
- Jane : So it was quite an interesting experience. I'd better go.
- A) You know. I've always thought his portraits of men are superior to those of his women.
- B) I worried about that too before I went. Perhaps a little more variety was desirable.
- C) Oh, I never ever miss a chance of seeing any of Rembrandt's paintings.
- D) Actually I did. It was worth.
- E) It was crowded when I went there, if that's the answer to your question.

55. Jason : I hear you went to see Rigolette at the opera.
- Mary : Yes, I did. It was a superb production.
- Jason : ----
- Mary : I know they did, but I can't think why. In my opinion, it was ideally suited to the production.
- A) There was a huge supporting cast. I believe including a lot of actors.
- B) Of course, Rigolette himself was brilliant I suppose.
- C) What about the stage setting? Some critics attacked it quite vehemently.
- D) Some people considered the orchestra the best part of all.
- E) The reviews of it have all been full of praise.

56. Jill : What sort of people made up the Bloomsbury Group? I thought there were only writers.
- James : ----
- Jill : Even economists and so on?
- James : Oh, certainly. Clive Bell, for instance, was a well-known economist in the group.
- A) Actually, some writers disliked the group intensely.
- B) There were a lot of writers; Virginia Woolf, for instance.
- C) They took their name from the area in London where some of them lived.
- D) Well, the majority probably were writers. But the group included intellectuals of all kinds.
- E) I suppose Virginia Woolf and her sister Vanessa founded the group.

No eighteenth century king of England could have raised the vast sums needed to build a Versailles, and no English nobleman would have cared to compete with the German princelings in luxury and extravagance. Still, it is true that the building craze did reach England. The most striking example is Marlborough Blenheim Palace, which is on a massive scale. But this is an exception. The ideal of the English eighteenth century was not the castle but the country house. The architects of these country houses usually rejected the extravagances of the Baroque style. It was their ambition not to break any rule of what they considered "good taste", and so they were anxious to keep as closely as possible to the real or pretended laws of classical architecture. Architects of the Italy Renaissance who had studied and measured the ruins of classical buildings with scientific care published their findings in textbooks to provide builders and craftsmen with patterns. The most famous of these books was written by Andrea Palladio. This book of Palladio came to be considered as the ultimate authority on all rules of taste in architecture in eighteenth-century England. To build one's villa in the Palladio manner was considered the last word in fashion.

57. It is clear that the aim of the opening sentence in this passage is to ---- .

- A) underline the extravagance of European architecture as a relief against the restraint of the English
- B) point out how much importance English kings had always given to their residencies
- C) criticise the extravagant immoral behaviour of the German princelings
- D) emphasise the envy that the eighteenth-century English kings felt for Versailles and the palaces of German
- E) draw attention to the economic crisis England went through during the eighteenth-century

58. It is pointed out in the passage that Palladio's book on classical architecture ---- .

- A) was primarily concerned with the Baroque style in eighteenth-century Europe
- B) had a powerful influence on architectural taste in eighteenth-century England
- C) is a text book dealing with a variety of buildings in the classical style of the eighteenth century
- D) is merely descriptive and has no scientific basis
- E) was the most famous text published in the eighteenth century

59. As we understand from the passage, for the England of the eighteenth century, good taste in architecture ---- .

- A) was best reflected in Blenheim and so this palace was often copied
- B) was understood to be simplicity and beauty of style
- C) meant strict imitation of the most extravagant classical buildings
- D) meant the construction of palaces on the scale of Versailles
- E) meant faithfully observing the principles followed by classical architects

60. In the 2nd line of the text, the word "raised" most probably means ---- .

- A) increased
- B) gathered
- C) diminished
- D) aggravated
- E) distributed

Throughout the history of music, composers have always sought to find new and original means of expression. Without this urge no progress could have been made in our modern age when the desire to experiment is stronger than it ever was before. This is partly because the instability of world affairs has given rise to a feeling of unrest and insecurity, and partly because more people are being better educated and concerned with culture. The arts are now, as a result, more sophisticated, even more artificial. In the past, the idea was the natural and spontaneous expression of beauty, but it no longer is. In order to avoid the obvious and the commonplace, some composers have, perhaps, moved too far from the main stream of music, and this has sometimes led to eccentricity. But there is a positive side to all this: there is a healthy lack of complacency.

61. The main point made in the passage is that, if there is to be any progress in music, ---- .

- A) a wide variety of taste must be taken into account
- B) new and innovative ways of expression must be searched for
- C) efforts must be made to please all sections of society
- D) the traditional modes of expression must be respected
- E) a composer must seek the natural and spontaneous expression of beauty

62. One can conclude from the passage that modern music ---- .

- A) has been adversely affected by present prevailing intellectual atmosphere
- B) owes much of its appeal to the spontaneity and simplicity of its expression
- C) has been less affected by the spread of education and culture than the other arts
- D) has isolated itself from the realities and the developments of our time
- E) is to a greater extent than ever before both experimental and sophisticated

63. The writer suggests that the desire of some composers to avoid the traditional forms of music ---- .

- A) has resulted in their growing complacency
- B) has been the key to their unprecedented popularity
- C) may have had a harmful effect upon some of their works
- D) has been misunderstood by the better educated people
- E) has been far more harmful than beneficial

64. The word "commonplace" in the 16th line of the text is close in meaning to ---- .

- A) ordinary
- B) extravagant
- C) excellent
- D) superfluous
- E) hard-to-find

65. - 68. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

A state of war may be brought to an end in one of four ways. In the first place, one belligerent may completely overrun the territory of its enemy, whose armies and government are in consequence entirely disrupted. This state of affairs, known as debellatio, came to pass in the case of Germany in World War II. Secondly, states may drift from a state of war to one of peace without any formalities to mark the transition. Such was the case in the war between Poland and Sweden in 1716. Thirdly, formal declarations of peace may be made by one or both of the belligerents. An example of this is seen in the joint resolution of the United States Congress of 1920 by which the war with German was terminated. Lastly, there remains the most common method of ending a state of war, namely, by making a treaty of peace. By this means belligerents can define with precision the exact terms upon which they have ended the conflict.

65. According to the passage, the term "debellatio" ---- .

- A) refers to the occupation of Germany by its enemies following World War II
- B) refers solely to the destruction of the enemy's armed forces
- C) is only ever used with reference to Germany at the end of World War II
- D) involves the signing of a peace treaty by the belligerents after the armies of both sides are unable to carry on fighting
- E) signifies the complete defeat of one country by another, resulting in a state of utter powerlessness there

66. We understand from the passage that one of the advantages of a peace treaty is that ---- .

- A) the conditions for the termination of a state of war are clearly set down and agreed upon by both sides
- B) the armies of the warring sides are temporarily disbanded
- C) it takes effect as soon as it has been signed by at least one of the sides
- D) the likelihood of renewed aggression is relatively reduced
- E) it doesn't require the approval of the government of either side

67. As it is pointed out in the passage, a war ---- .

- A) often drags on despite the desire on both sides to end it
- B) can sometimes come to an end of its own accord without any formal action being taken by either side
- C) rarely ends without the complete destruction of the armies of one side
- D) can be brought to an end through the intervention of outside powers
- E) is likely to continue until both sides are so exhausted and impoverished it is impossible for them to continue

68. In the 9th line of the above passage, the verb "drift" has a meaning similar to ---- .

- A) combine with
- B) akin to
- C) distinguish
- D) change
- E) stabilise

By the 1950s, Africa was among the least developed of the continents and, according to United Nations estimates, as much as 70% of its resources of land and labour were devoted to subsistence production and only about 5% of its total population was engaged in wage-earning employment. But even with agriculture there was increasing production for export: cocoa in Ghana, groundnuts and oil-palm products in Nigeria, cotton in Uganda, coffee in Kenya, and maize and sheep-rearing in southern Africa were outstanding examples. Minerals were particularly important in bringing about the opening up of the interior of Africa. For centuries some parts, like the Gold Coast (now Ghana) had produced gold, and during the 19th century first diamonds and then gold were discovered in South Africa, and since then numerous other minerals have been exploited including copper and cobalt.

69. According to the passage, interior of Africa ---- .

- A) was one of the first parts of the continent to be developed
- B) was agriculturally one of the most fertile parts of Africa
- C) could barely support subsistence farming some fifty years ago
- D) became better known following the discovery of rich mineral deposits there
- E) had, by the nineteenth century, been fully explored

70. As it is pointed out in this passage about Africa, it was on account of its mineral resources that ---- .

- A) the interior parts of this continent were opened up
- B) industry developed fast here
- C) the agricultural potential was not recognised for a long time
- D) the practice of sheep-rearing quickly died out
- E) this continent had developed a strong economy by 1950

71. It is stated in the passage that, prior to 1950, in Africa ---- .

- A) subsistence farming was rapidly becoming a thing of the past
- B) the country's mineral wealth was only just being discovered
- C) very few people had any paid work
- D) the interior was quite densely populated
- E) agricultural activities were extremely limited

72. In the first sentence of the text, the phrase "devoted to" most probably means ---- .

- A) be deprived of
- B) lack something
- C) subside
- D) overflow
- E) dedicated to

Most large firms have marketing or advertising departments that work in conjunction with their advertising agencies. Only one part of the company's sales budget will be spent through the advertising agency. Companies have their own sales force for calling on wholesale and retail organisations. In many cases, they also produce a proportion of their sales literature and shop display material. But with the larger companies sales promotion efforts are usually combined under a single marketing policy which is often worked out by the company itself in conjunction with its advertising agency. The advertising agency may also be consulted over packaging systems and the distributing of new products that are being put on the market.

73. It is pointed out in the passage that a major firm will usually ---- .

- A) use an advertising agency in addition to its own advertising department
- B) prefer to keep changing its marketing policy
- C) allocate its sales budget to a single advertising agency
- D) seek to dominate the market through intensive advertising
- E) aim to meet the needs of its traditional clients

74. We learn from the passage that an advertising agency ---- .

- A) cannot work profitably except with major companies
- B) is not usually regarded as being cost effective except by very large companies
- C) is not interested in the question of how new products are packaged
- D) always prefers to work independently of a company's own advertising department
- E) may be consulted about the ways by which new products can best be distributed

75. According to the passage, companies ---- .

- A) sometimes feel that their own advertising departments are scarcely viable
- B) usually leave their display materials completely to the discretion of advertising agencies
- C) often find their wholesales are more profitable than their retail ones
- D) are not fully convinced of the advantages of using an advertising agency
- E) generally distribute their goods through their own sales network

76. The phrase "consulted over", which appears in the last sentence of the text, has a meaning similar to ---- .

- A) ask opinion for
- B) have an argument with
- C) combine with
- D) write down in detail
- E) spend on

The term intelligence is often used by biologists as synonymous with the capacity to learn. An animal that learns to adapt itself to a wide range of situations is said to be more intelligent than one whose behaviour is largely governed by instinct. In psychology, on the other hand, so wide a definition is not satisfactory. The simpler forms of learning, at least, can scarcely be said to manifest intelligence in any sense remotely consistent with the ordinary meaning of the term. It is customary, therefore, to distinguish between learning of a more or less repetitive and mechanical type and the solving of genuinely new problems by creative means. It is the latter rather than the former that we ordinarily ascribe to intelligence and most psychologists allow their definition of this term to be guided by popular usage.

77. This passage emphasises the fact that the term "intelligence" ---- .

- A) should not be applied to any animals as they are motivated by instincts
- B) is used by biologists to describe the ability of animals to adapt to a given situation and so learn
- C) is frequently wrongly used and should therefore be avoided altogether
- D) should be avoided by psychologists as there is so much disagreement about its meaning
- E) must be applied to all forms of learning from the simplest to the most complicated

78. In this passage, a sharp distinction is drawn between ---- .

- A) intelligence and the ability to learn as regards the animal world
- B) the term "intelligence" as the ordinary people use it and as most psychologists do
- C) the repetitive and the mechanical types of learning
- D) learning that is repetitive and mechanical and that which is creative and original
- E) the less intelligent animal species and the more intelligent ones

79. According to the passage, in the animal kingdom, the less intelligent animals ---- .

- A) learn to adapt to new situations more quickly than the more intelligent ones
- B) are stimulated when they face a new situation
- C) are those whose actions are mainly controlled by their instincts
- D) are more suited to mechanical type of learning than to other types
- E) have many advantages over the more intelligent ones

80. In the last sentence of the text, the verb "ascribe" is similar in meaning to ---- .

- A) pertain
- B) involve
- C) disdain
- D) resemble
- E) attribute
